The best seat in the house
could have your name on it.

At Cazadero Performing Arts Camp, all the world's a stage.

Set amid towering, old-growth redwoods, Caz is about making music within and around nature in its majestic glory. Each summer, hundreds of campers of all ages gather to learn and perform outdoors in the beautiful Russian River camp that has been home to Caz for nearly 50 years. And at the end of each session, they take part in a music performance and celebration to a packed house of parents and friends.

You can be in the audience, whether you're sitting there or not.

At the heart of Cazadero is an open-air auditorium, the Lutt Family Amphitheater, which is now under construction. Scheduled for completion by summer 2007 – the 50th anniversary of Caz – the new state-of-the-art stage and shell is named for the camp's much beloved founders, Robert and Beth Lutt, and promises to far surpass its predecessor both acoustically and technologically.

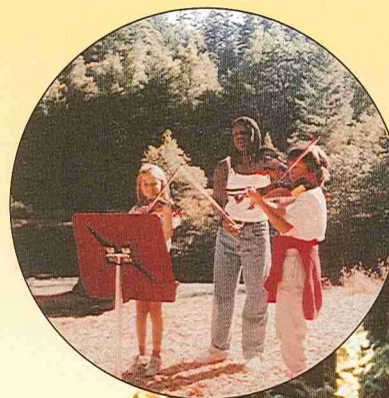

Rising from stage level will be a semi-circle ring of one-of-a-kind redwood benches with seating for 600 total. Each bench will be made from lumber recycled from original camp buildings. And each bench will have its own story.

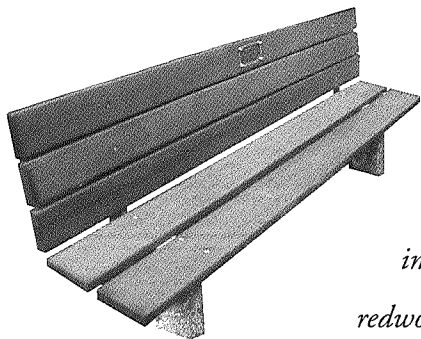

Make a bench a part of your history.

A $1500 fully tax deductible donation to the bench campaign will leave a legacy for generations of Caz audiences to come. Built to last, these custom-made benches seat 6 people and are an enduring testament to a tradition of inspired music-making in a place like no other Cazadero.

The best seat in the house could have your name on it.

*A Cazadero Legacy Bench

brass plaque, construction and redwood and is built to last for generations.*
